Blown to Atoms.

A terrible explosion occurred yesterday morning at the mouth of St. Johns river, Fla., by which two men were killed and several men injured. Captain R. G. Ross, in charge of the Government jetty work at St. Johns bar, has been engaged for several days in blowing up the submerged wreck of the old Dutch brig Neva, which has for years obstructed the channel off Mayport. He had in his employ a lighter in command of A. C. Moore, with a crew of twelve men. Two of the men, R. T. Moore, a son of the captain, and a man named Powell, colored, were soldering a twenty-five-pound can of dynamite, when it exploded with a terrific report, and blew both men to atoms, only one toe of Moore being found after the explosion. Engineer Dunn of the lighter was badly wounded in the side and arm. Capt. Moore was blackened by the explosion and badly shaken up, but is not seriously injured. He is, however, in a state of mind almost bordering upon insanity by reason of the terrible fate of his son. The explosion was heard for miles around, and caused an upheaval of water and tremor of the earth, which created considerable alarm. The steam tug Robert Turner went hurriedly to the scene of the disaster, and then blew whistles of distress which brought the government steamer and others to the rescue, and carried Dunn to Mayport, where he could receive medical treatment. The lighter was boarded immediately after the explosion to ascertain what other damage was done, and everything was found one mass of wreck and ruin. The machinery of the jetty lighter and engine was completely demolished, a big hole being found on the deck of the lighter, and the crew badly demoralized. A search was at once instituted for the remains of the men, but without further success. Moore's vest and pants were subsequently found among the floating wreckage, torn completely in shreds. Moore, the white man killed, was twenty-two years old, and unmarried. This is the first serious accident that has occurred at these jetties since the work began several years ago.
